

Where Everyone Knows Your Name

What is the look for this winter?
Beautiful, shiny hair – of course!
And that's something you can look forward to finding at Zúmay Salon.

In May, the Zúmay team spent a full day and night at a Tony & Guy Cut-and-Colour Seminar. The day was spent learning consultation and communication skills. These skills are vital in hairdressing, as you know, because getting the look you asked for and then being able to recreate it when you get home is so important. As a result of this training, the stylists at Zúmay will be offering each client a 'how to' flyer that will be custom-made at the end of each visit. The flyer is designed to help you to remember what your stylist used and did to create your perfect hair do.

In the evening, the seminar continued with training on colouring and cutting. The colours were rich and solid, using three or more colours from the same family to create shadowing effects. The cuts were very choppy and textured, with a few disconnected layered looks. This is a great look for those who want to keep some length but also want movement and height. The results were truly beautiful!

The team at Zúmay Salon has also been busy working on a two-day photo shoot with renowned photographer Ian Golding. The photos are so good that some of the girls have entered them into the L'Oreal colour trophy. We're looking forward to showing you all the pictures once the judging is completed in June.

Zúmay Salon owner Lorna Evans has called the new portfolio the Vintage Rose collection. Matrix has even invited Lorna to showcase the collection at Hair Expo, in Sydney, over the June long weekend.

Also in June, Zúmay Salon will undergo a make over of its own. Lorna has been working with interior decorator Mel Decarlo and Pat the builder (not Bob the Builder!) to come up with some great ideas. The new-look Zúmay Salon will use Designers Guild wallpapers mixed with dark timbers and wrought iron. While the look will be fresh and exciting, it is still really important to Lorna that the Salon retains the warmth and individual atmosphere it is known for.
