How does it work?

Light energy (heat) is applied to the skin containing the hair follicles. The follicle and blood feeder roots are damaged. The hair falls out and another one doesn't grow.

What areas can be treated?

Any area where hair grows can be treated, even the sensitive bits.

Does it hurt?

It hurts more in dark skinned people and those with dense dark hairs. No anesthesia is required and most clients describe the pain as moderate and acceptable (as if a hairbrush has been tapped against the skin)

How many treatments are necessary?

Only hair in the growth phase can be treated. The number of hairs in this phase varies from 20% to 90% depending on the body site. The lengths of the growth cycles also vary from 6 to 24 weeks depending on the body site. For most people three to five treatments are sufficient to clear an area of hair. After the first treatment most patients get a significant reduction in hair density also new grown hairs tend to become finer.
